Wildfire support for you

If you are experiencing mental distress or need assistance with food, housing, and other essential needs, help is available.

Managing your stress

Call the numbers shown here to receive the help you need. Be patient; call centers may be receiving many calls and texts.

Counselors can help you manage your stress and help you determine the next steps you can take to care for yourself and your family.

Come together with your community. Together, you can offer each other support.

Be kind to yourself and others. Take a break from the news. Try to find ways to be productive to give yourself a sense of action and control in this difficult time.

Keep things in perspective. You are strong, and you will get through this.

Carelon Behavioral Health has set up a support line to listen to your concerns and problem solve with you.
